50X1-HUM

Light, spacious buildings of the largest textile industry enterprise in the Kazakh SSR, the Cotton Combine, have grown up on the outskirts of Chimkent. In 1953, nearly 300 looms and almost 20,000 spinning spindles were installed and put into operation. Now all equipment of the spinning and weaving mills are operating. Production is increasing from day to day.

Construction of the finishing mill is progressing rapidly. By putting this mill in operation, it will be possible to start production of various colored and patterned fabrics and to set up production of such fabrics as velvet and panne. Construction of the second section of the combine will be initiated with the completion of the finishing mill.

A large textile workers settlement has been constructed next to the combine.
